July 4 – July 23, 2015

Visual Ethnography of Cityscapes

Applicants:

Social/Political Sciences & Humanities

The Netherlands Institute at Athens and the Athens Ethnographic Film Festival organize this intensive summer school in collaboration with staff from the University of Leiden and other Dutch and Greek universities.

About the course

Nowadays, visual anthropology has become an almost indispensable tool for anyone engaging in ethnographic research, visual analysis, studies of material culture, or critical engagements with cinema, photography and other forms of cultural display. By discussing the available methodological tools and critically reflecting on their application within urban contexts, we are focusing on the visual ethnography of cityscapes. Students will learn how to use audio-visual ethnographic methods in one of the most interesting urban landscapes of Europe and will produce a short ethnographic film to be presented in a special section in the Athens Ethnographic Film Festival.

It is apparent that today the visual, in all its manifestations, possesses a special place in the "world" of anthropology and social sciences. Besides the internal changes in the academia and the technological developments that have reshaped the relationship of anthropology/ethnography with the use of audio-visual means, the field of visual anthropology has by now expanded both in terms of scope and institutional role.

These recent changes have not been thoroughly explored in the cityscapes of Greece. Although the social, political and economic transformations of the last years are being examined by social and political scientists, there is a need to add to our toolbox visual ethnography and visual anthropology in a more systematic way.

In our summer school we are having a focus on the theoretical position of the visual within social/political theory and on the practical use of audio-visual means in the ethnographic process. In examining the use of visual methods, the courses will concentrate on both historical and contemporary examples of ethnographic film and photography.

Structure of the course

From July 4th until July 23rd 2015 the seminar will run daily, at the NIA in Athens and will involve field research (film & photography production) in specific neighbourhoods of Athens and in selected locations. The seminar will focus on a general theoretical context in relation to visual anthropology/ethnographic methodology and contemporary approaches to field research in an urban setting with an overview of the current situation in Greece. Most days, one or two intensive sessions of three-five hours in total will be conducted. In these sessions, specialised lecturers will give an overview of the theory of visual anthropology/ ethnography with reference to key debates and a clear focus on cityscapes in Athens (Greece). During the rest of the day(s) students will be able to conduct their research and record ethnographically with cameras their topics of interest. In preparation to the seminar, all students are expected to have read the literature before their arrival in Greece.

Aim

The aim of the seminar is to give students the experience of filming in a highly diverse and multi-layered urban setting, present the product (film) of their research in Athens in a special section in the Ethnographic film festival of Athens and have an overview of current debates and research topics in visual anthropology and ethnography. By participating and learning the filming and production process, the students gain some practical experience in the new context, use their skills, make new contacts and learn how to present their findings within wider local and global processes.

Method

During the seminar the students are expected to participate actively in all the sessions and conduct a visual ethnographic field research. The small “ethnographic film project” might have a focus on life stories, specific neighbourhoods or social networks but it can expand to wider processes such as politics, migration or religion. In collaboration with local research groups, students will be able to come in contact with various people to discuss, interview and materialize their topics. Students will record and collect their material, which will be put together under the guidance of experienced staff in order to be presented at the end of our school and later to the Athens Ethnographic Film Festival. Each student or group of students will be producing a short ethnographic film of approximately 5 minutes.

Course requirements, language and evaluation

The course is available to outstanding last year BA, Master and first year PhD students. All lectures will be given in English. Their performance during courses, their final product (short film) and a text of 1500 words in relation to the filming process will be evaluated by this year’s appointed Review Committee.

In addition all students will be encouraged to work further on their film in collaboration with the instructors and the Athens Ethnographic Film Festival. The deadline for submitting the film for this summer school special section of the festival is November 1st. The festival will be taking place from 27th till 29th of November.

Course period, dates and times

The course consists of 19 intensive days with lectures and field research. The first course day will be on the 4th of July, the last on the 22nd, and the presentations of students will take place on the 23rd of July 2015. Classes are daily at 09.00 to 15.00 (depending on courses) including lunch break. The rest of the time students will be conducting field research.
