Advancing the interdisciplinary study of all things Greek.

“The Modern Greek Studies Association continues to promote the primary goal identified at its inception nearly 50 years ago: to invigorate the scholarly dialogue about all issues—historical and contemporary—pertaining to Greece. From literature and culture to politics and the economy, there is no greater resource for those interested in Greek studies.”

—Edmund Keeley,
Professor Emeritus of English and Creative Writing, Princeton University
Founding Member/First President of the MGSA

Exploring the transitions with intellectual discourse on all things Greek.

As the Modern Greek Studies Association (MGSA) nears its 50th anniversary, members appreciate its rootedness in the foundations of Greek history and culture. At the same time, members value the Association’s contemporary, interdisciplinary focus on everything from Greek language and arts to history, politics, and the diversity of modern Greek society.

Comprising teachers, students, scholars, and individuals interested in Greek history and Culture, the MGSA has grown dramatically in size, reputation, and influence since its beginnings in 1968. Today, it is the intellectual home for diaspora Greeks, Greek Americans, and thought-leaders with a passion for the field of Greek studies.

Members enjoy exchanging ideas at the biennial Symposia and posting on the exclusive MGSA-L listerv, as well as the following benefits:

Monastiraki Square, Athens (Thinkstock).

Keeping Greek Scholarship Vibrant through Academic Awards

The MGSA awards four highly competitive prizes for Greek scholarship. Open to scholars at all points in their careers, these prizes make sure Greek studies are part of the scholarly conversation.

The Edmund Keeley Book Prize is awarded to an author writing about modern Greece or a Hellenic theme, published originally in English. This prize contributes to the widespread dissemination of Greek scholarship in the English-speaking world.

The Elizabeth Constantinides Memorial Translation Prize raises the profile of contemporary Greek literature by recognizing an exceptional, new translation into English of a literary work published in Modern Greek.

The John O. Iatrides Best Dissertation Prize is awarded biennially at the MGSA Symposium for the best English-language dissertation on a Greek subject, serving to connect the humanities and social sciences with the post-Byzantine Greek world and Greek diasporas.

The 2015/2017 Victor S. Papacosma Graduate Student Essay Prize is awarded for an essay dealing with the post-Byzantine Greek world. This prize infuses the MGSA with fresh scholarly viewpoints and supports the recipient with a cash award, reimbursement for attendance of the Association’s Symposium, and one-year membership in the MGSA.
